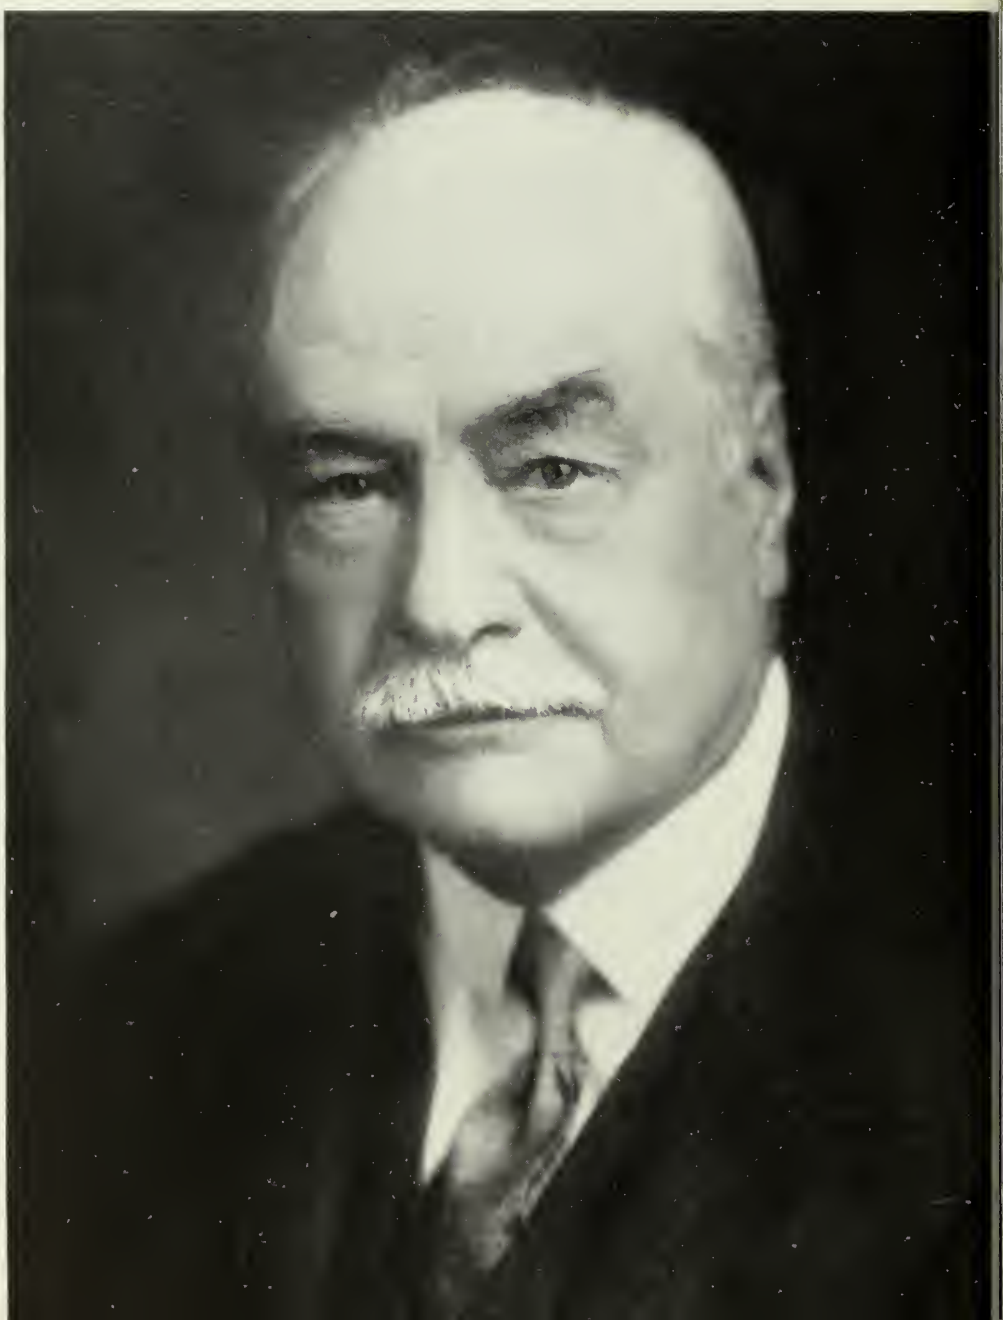
NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER

President of the University



VIRGINIA CROCHERON GILDERSLEEVE

Dean of the College

As Mortarboard goes to press, announcement is made of the appointment of Dean Gildersleeve as a Member of the American Delegation to the United Nations Conference to be held in San Francisco in the Spring. This is the highest honor ever paid to a woman by the government of the United States, and has won the praise and approval of the university world and of the nation.

BULLETIN OF INFORMATION
THE REGISTRAR

Freshman Whirl

The Class of 1948 was swept into the flurry of Freshman Week Activities by a committee of hostesses chairmanned by Louise Du Bois. Transfers were welcomed by Betty Burton and Nadine Foss.

Arriving at Barnard Hall, on opening day, they were mustered into small groups by the upperclassmen, introduced to everybody in sight and marched off to the Library by their hostesses, who abandoned them to their Blue Books and the complications of our Library system as interpreted by Miss Greene, the Librarian.

Rescued from the Library, they crossed to McMillin theatre for the Opening Exercises of Columbia University. Impressed by the beauty and dignity of a full Academic Procession, by the address of Dr. Butler, and by the century-old tradition, they sang their new Alma Mater with a thrill of anticipation. As she conducted a guided tour around the campus, each hostess attempted to explain the functions of Honor Board, Rep Assembly, and the importance of National Service on campus. She answered their queries about Student Mail, Jake, and the Jungle. Invitations to teas, dances, luncheons, plus a score of posters advertising the plans of various clubs and organizations erased any fears they had been harboring about the limitations of campus life in the city.

becoming acquainted

The Freshman discovered that the dorm population is classified according to floors. In a few days she began to feel at home in Hewitt.

The "cosmopolitan atmosphere" is a much used phrase, but until the newcomer found herself at dorm breakfast or a cafeteria luncheon with a young lady from Poland, China, or Mexico, she did not realize its significance. New and stimulating friendships highlighted the first days for dorm denizens and subway-stair victims alike.

Junior hostesses await their freshman sisters . . . and tag them.

With organ hymns, with a crimson-gowned choir, with the chaplain's friendly message, St. Paul's Chapel warmly welcomes them.

The Dean, Dr. McGuire, and Undergraduate President, Sabra Follett, are next to greet the newcomers who lunch at Hewitt Hall and receive Alumnae mementoes of the day.

Luncheon is followed by an introduction to student government at work. . . .

student government

When Miss 1948 entered the undergraduate body politic, she became a part of the correlated, constructive, and often combustive organization of student government. She set her steps to follow bear-tracks laid by its black-robed leaders. She heard the program of President Sabra Follett in a plea for "student participation, active representation and an intensified honor code."

Since the recent change in the constitution, the creating of policy has come within the scope of the large, informal body, Rep Assembly. Non-assembly members were encouraged to join the sandwich-munching group at their Monday meetings, to hear their heated debates and add their ideas to the discussion.

Sabra Follett, President of the Undergraduate Association.

Honor Board, also in activated spirit, initiated the tapping system in one of the most vigorous years of student politics Barnard Hall has ever seen.

Nurses' Aides: Alice Jacobson and Sidney Cook.

Community Service: Sally Ferris and Marcia Barishman assisting at Morningside.

national service

A determined committee set out to enlist the aid of every student in some war effort activity. Interviews with freshmen, registration cards for all, and recruiting campaigns set students rolling bandages with a vengeance, aiding in hospitals and caring for Morningside charges. The juniors initiated class projects, and drive boxes on Jake were filled to the hilt. Barnard at war was at work.

interfaith work

With pride Barnard introduces new students to her successful Interfaith program at the first Chapel service. Invited to tea to meet the religious counselors, they become interested in the work of their own group and then in the efforts for mutual understanding, and agreement on the broader topics. Thursday luncheons after Chapel provide discussion time, while Wednesday Open House and in particular the occasional tea dances are underlined on the calendar in Navy Blue and Gold.

Highlight of the Spring program was Religious Emphasis Week; its theme: "religion in contemporary life and faith for today."

Religious Clubs: Episcopal, Menorah, Lutheran, Wycliffe.

Newman Club, large attendance as usual.

Barnard Christian Fellowship inaugurated this year.

Interfaith Council: (Standing) Ruth Philpotts, Beth Crouter; (seated) Jessie Scott, Betty Sachs, chairman, Annette Auld; Doris Mohr and Iris Davis.

Interfaith Assembly Speakers: Chaplain Rice, Dr. Harrington, Dr. Buttrick.

milbank hall

Industry is the prime virtue at Barnard. Frosh learned that academic requirements were hard and fast and second to none in importance.

Representation

Committees

social committee

Candlelight Ball, the first commuter's Christmas formal, brightly gleamed on the calendar of Social Committee along with midshipman coffee dances and V-12 hops.

term drive

Under the direction of Edith Bornn, the National War Fund fall drive persistently raised and over-reached its goal. Clifton Fadiman, a Carnival and Cake Sales helped swell Hitler's fever chart.

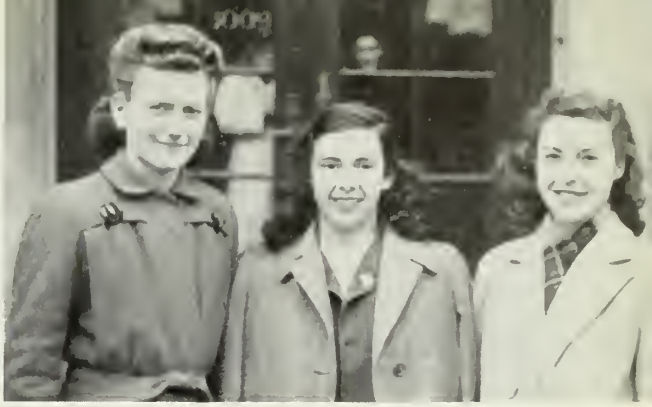
Blue Book is to Barnard Hall what catalogues are to Milbank. Clubs and the components of Undergradnate Association are enumerated and explained with invitations to join.



eligibility

Steer clear of too much too early is Eligibility's word of warning on "extra-curric" to the poster signing frosh. The committee wields carefully its power to lay down the law to over-enthusiastic bidders for high point places on the activity scene.

Clubs

co-op club

In the academic and practical sense, principles of economy are put in play by Co-op, Milbank basement hole-in-the-wall which handles an efficient textbook exchange through cooperative canons.

Clubs

music club

Significant Music Club note this year was the swelling of its ranks beyond all previous composition. Brooks Parlor musicales of native talent lent an informal tone to its varied program which included, in crescendo, famous lecturers and concert artists.

glee club

The Glee Club also gives voice to a record membership, enthusiasm having hit a new pitch under Mr. Igor Buketoff's superb direction. Male bassos joined the Spring and Christmas concerts through the successful "importation" of guest clubs.

fine arts club

Appreciation is the aim of Fine Arts Club activity, which, led by Marcia Barishman, includes Odd Study exhibits, ranging from Cuban oils to Chinese prints and back to Russian ikons.

science club

Homo sapiens of the Science Club, headed by Pat Fitzgerald, are hard hit by the shortage of men. Below they keep company with Pithecanthropus erectus, a Piltdown papa and old gramp gibbon.

math club

With the rule of Angela Bornn and a faculty compass of Miss Ladue and Miss Comer, the Math Club studies applications of numerical methods to the winning of a war.

classical club

Echoes of Homer resound as the Classical Club, Margaret Winter in the chair, delves into the ancient cultures of Greece and Rome, museum trips providing a tool.

la societe francaise realizes its aim of providing opportunities for speaking and hearing French by sponsoring plays, lectures, and teas designed to familiarize students with French culture.

deutscher kreis

famed for one of Barnard's most pleasant traditions, The Christmas Tree Party and for its oldest member, "Papa Brann", the German Club expounds the importance of German culture in rehabilitation.

el circulo hispano

members are brought into close contact with Spanish life through lectures, musicales and dramatic performances and horizons are broadened by friendships with Latin American students.

italian club

aims to create an awareness of the rich cultural contributions of Italy.

Wigs and Cues presents Julius Caesar

With the assistance of English '81, under the superb direction of José Ruben, the newly organized Wigs and Cues undertook the production of Julius Caesar. At first the problems of staging the mob, of feminine portraits of warlike men, and toga-impedimenta loomed large. But the club members had proven themselves in Elizabethan scenes, having presented Marlowe's Edward II in December '44, and were anxious to accept the challenge, assured of the help of Mr. Ruben director of the Dramatic Workshop.

When the cast had been chosen, there began weeks of rehearsal, Saturdays, Sundays, and midnights in Milbank, attendance required by stage manager, Sally Stubblefield. Mr. Ruben, with cigarette holders, scripts, eyeglasses and briefcase spread out at the foot of the stage was friendly encouraging and inspiring, and Miss Marcia Freeman assisted capably. Dorm girls were recruited for mob scenes, who having once seen Mr. Ruben bring life to a scene, became as enthusiastic as the rest of the cast. It was the perfect co-ordination of the mob —as Caesar's train and especially during the funeral speeches that kept up the pace, the color, and the timing, formulated by the director. The rich costumes, successful staging and sound effects fascinated the audience no less than the performances of Leora Dana as Cassius, Raiford Ragsdale as Brutus, Ann Murphy as Antony, Wesley Ward as Caesar, Willa Babcock as Calpurnia, Joan Taylor as Portia, and Chaucy Horsley as Gaius Ligarius.

C. U. R. C.

An increasing number of local dials turned to 620 in this year of C.U.R.C. history. As the only undergraduate activity participated in by Barnard, Columbia, and the V-12, it started off at a fast pace by broadcasting the returns of the presidential election. It went on to greater heights in the entertainment field with three C.U.R.C. canteens broadcast from Earl Hall first semester. There was glamour on-stage radiating from guest stars and name bands, and glamour a-foot as the Blue Lions leader swung into the current hits . . . A long-cherished dream came true when the first long-distance remote was inaugurated. In keeping with their policy of broadcasting as many Columbia Sports events as possible, C.U.R.C. brought its campus listeners the Yale-Columbia game . . . direct from New Haven! Despite technical difficulties the engineers and announcers managed a very professional job . . . The United Nations Information Council presented each week a program devoted to one of our allies . . . Concerts by musicians of the University and Juilliard, Recorded Requests, News, Sports Round-ups and other forms completed the schedule.

political council

The year of election, 1944, gave impetus to political interest and organization on campus. Jake was a fortress of F.D.R. buttons and "Time to Change" literature preceding November 7. Yet beyond all partisanship was a determined effort to get out the vote, bring out opinion and strike out prejudiced thought. Political Council performed the task admirably through an assembly debate and a college straw vote. Whatever the topic, a Council confab has an atmosphere of intellectual stimulation and awareness to world events.

Hope Simon presides in meeting with Professors Peardon and Harrington.

liberal club

"A democratic will and a democratic conscience"—motto of the new and active group led by Joanne Kuth.

debate club

Revived this year by Doris Clark, the club made the ancient art of refutation sound again.

Making up the dummy at deadline time.

Freshmen tryout.

When the last hole is filled and headlines counted, the Barnard Bulletin goes to press. Then to bed goes its staff, praying that the printer treats its "dummy" well. To them the Bulletin office, mess notwithstanding, is home. To the college at large its doors are the portals where pass student opinion and challenging campaigns. Policy of the newspaper this year was greater attention to campus affairs. Results—success and "letters to the editor."

sports week:

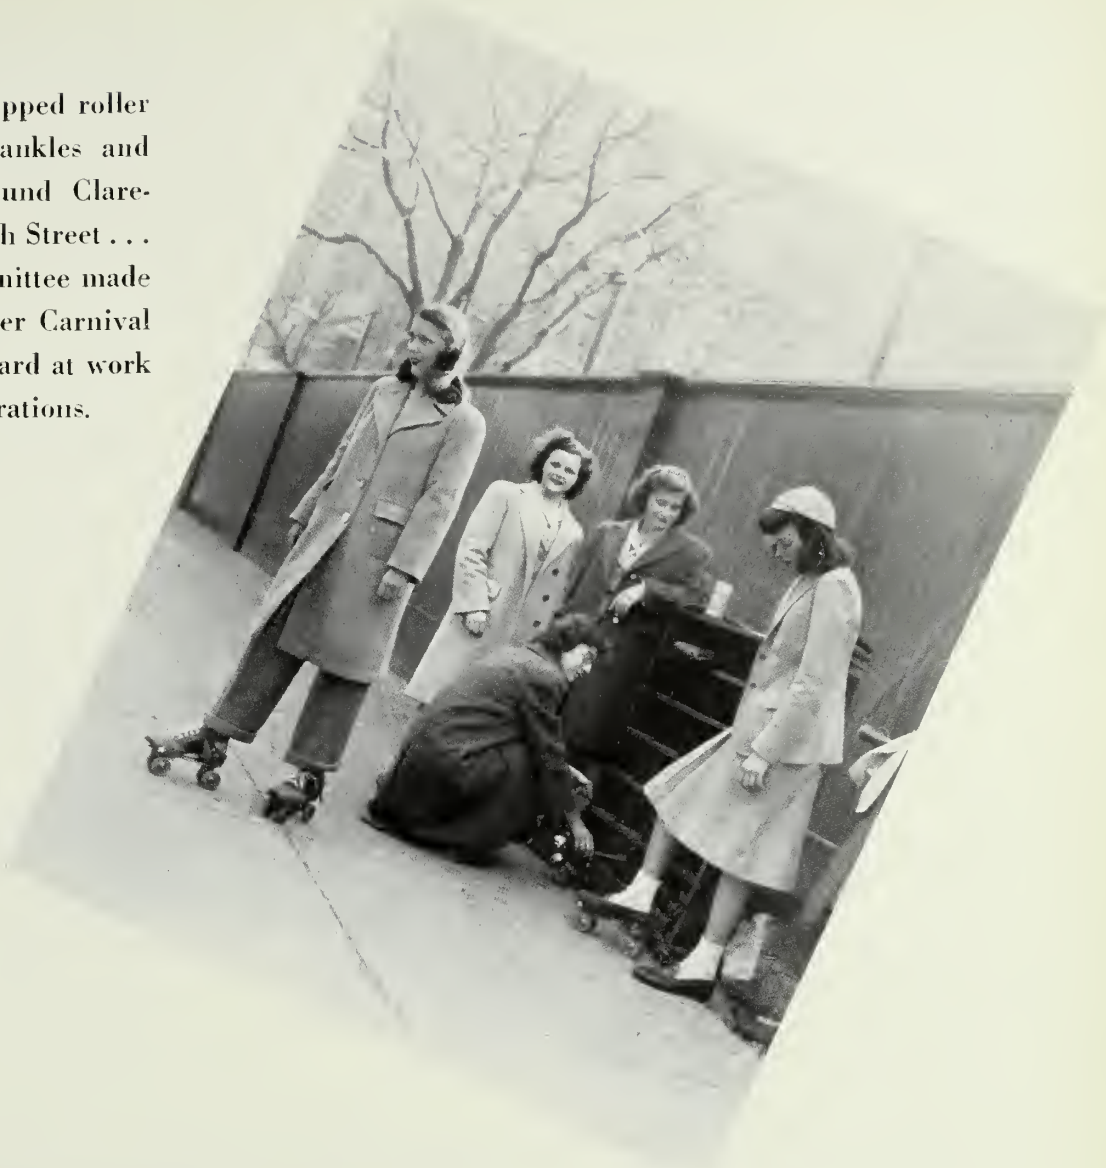
. . . tournaments and band-aids . . . faculty faces through the tenniquoit net . . . rain predicted, rather predestined, for the tennis meet . . . archery shot down the Claremont acreage . . . tennis rackets thrown into the air when we jump over the net—to meet the winner . . .

. . . Six Passes was once the exclusive menace of the Freshmen . . . now the germ has spread to the upper classes . . . and to the Indoor season . . . donning the red mini-togas of the opposition for the sake of basketball without baskets . . .

. . . low - intermediate balls are never high enough to get over the net . . . sooner or later they rise . . . terraced courts still a mystery . . .

. . . Fore! A hole in one—in the canvas net. Prerequisites for good golfing include a death grip and a swivel hip plus the fortitude to stand in a block-long line come registration morn.

Health Committee strapped roller skates onto Barnard ankles and sent them rolling 'round Claremont Avenue and 119th Street . . . while Swimming Committee made ready the annual Water Carnival and kept Anne Ross hard at work giving diving demonstrations.



Barnard Camp in the Westchester hills had an overflow of skiers, skaters, and sleepers 'tween semesters at Open House. Week-ends were reserved for individual clubs. Necessary impedimenta include: flannel shirts, blue jeans, pillow case, fees, fares, and r-e-d points!

Greek Games

After a hectic history of near suspension by Student Council in view of the war and shortages of everything from costumes and paintbrushes to Sophomore athletes, Greek Games, dedicated to Prometheus for his contemporary meaning, emerged as one of the loveliest pageants in Barnard's history. But there was no shortage of enthusiasm and so Greek Games remained a part of Barnard tradition.

The Sophomores carried off the most laurel wreaths, winning by the highest score in Games' history. Their dance portrayed a band of revelers celebrating the gift of fire from Prometheus. The gods, to avenge the theft, send Pandora to earth with a box containing all the evils of the world. When through curiosity she opens the secret box, fear and hatred and war are let loose upon man. Hope alone is left in the box for man.

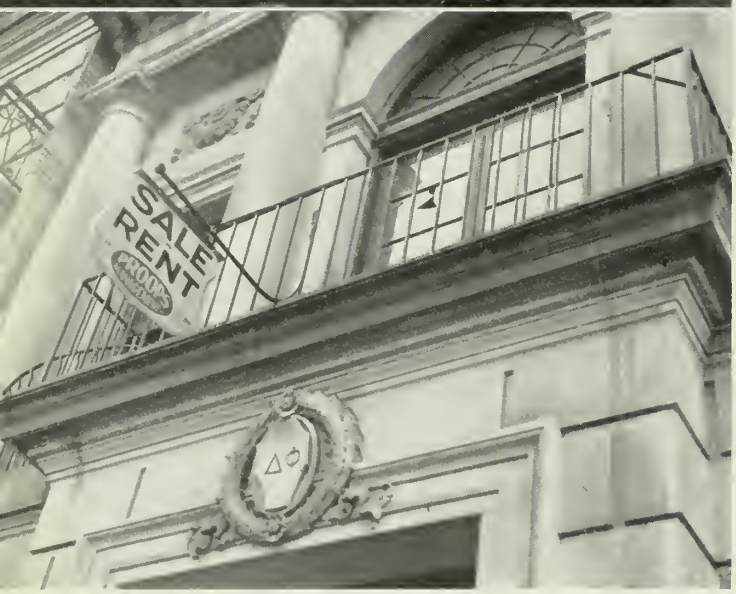
Relaxation

tradition

. . . College Teas . . . teas everyday in the week . . . upon any excuse . . . "Refreshments" written at the bottom of every invitation and poster . . . although you ate up your dues the first week . . . and that lovely non-exclusive phrase "Open to the college" . . . Frosh-Soph party . . . formals held in the gym . . . class meetings . . . Glee Club Concert . . . Christmas Assembly . . . Candlelight Service . . . Elections . . . Installation . . . Spring Dance and barbecue . . . have created a campus life for day students, too . . . these were activities we could continue in spite of the war.

relaxation

Relaxing is essential although the time allotted to it is nil . . . Tilson's still exists for cokes . . . and C.F.O.N. for coffee . . . the Jungle, diminutive figure 8 within whose boundaries it is lawful to smoke, lost fifteen trees in the hurricane last Fall . . . picnicking on the North Lawn marks the arrival of Spring . . . while Odd Study (right) and the Smoking Room persist as havens for the harassed.



and the innovations!

. . . faded into memories are the glories of the Columbia Junior Prom, Fraternity parties, football games, flowers, Senior Ball, Junior Show, and the old Lions' Den . . we are more grateful for monthly letters than ever we were for frequent phone calls . . . committees now arrange blind dates so that girls may attend formals and at the same time entertain servicemen . . . there are Coffee Dances with the Midshipmen's School . . . Even Study has been transformed into a National Service workroom . . . acceleration has confused class affiliations . . . the Navy is everywhere . . . the semester drive is no longer charity . . . Bulletin adopts a war orphan . . . and the day students have their first Christmas Formal, Candlelight Ball.

Dorothy Anderson

. . . takes her recreation in mild forms—sleeping's her pet pastime . . . likes books with substance to them, and swing and light operettas . . . hoping for a family in the near future, she doesn't want a permanent career . . . transferred from Middlebury, finds Barnard's atmosphere impersonal . . .

Mariette Arden

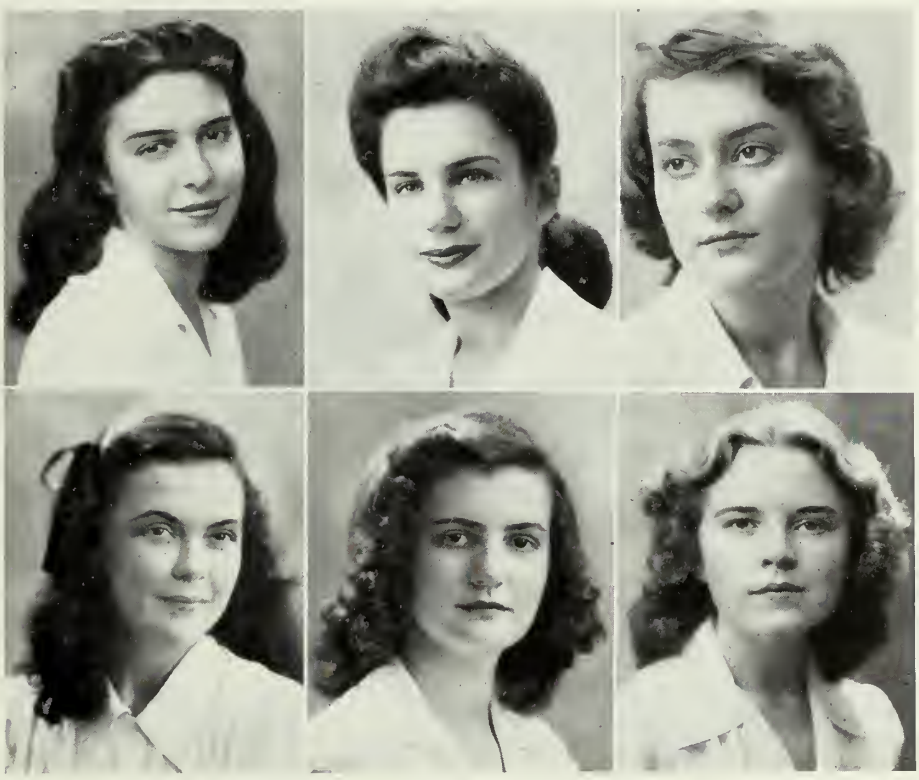
. . . vivacious, enthusiastic, plans a doctor's life . . . looks slick in her riding habit, also takes to boating, golf . . . was Chairman of Long Beach Officer's Committee . . . Barnard's best point is informality of professors . . . likes unusual clothes, courses that make you think . . .

Betty Barras

. . . insists she's strictly a career woman, with her eye on the theater, writing or both . . . born in the Canal Zone, Betty has travelled through Central America, Cuba, Haiti, boasts pierced ears, cultivated literary tastes, a critical mind, and an unusual capacity for enjoying work . . .

Phyllis Baron

. . . an advertising career is her choice for the future . . . at present she's a history major . . . came to us from Connecticut College . . . Russian novels, music and the ballet claim her close attention . . . but do not overshadow an enthusiasm for football, dancing, bridge . . .



Eugenia Bate

. . . an English comp major, with a talent for singing . . . a member of the choir . . . still excited about performing on the radio . . . says "maybe" to a career . . . but definitely plans on a family . . . horseback-riding her favorite sport . . . enthusiastic about Barnard, it's "the only place for me" . . .

Patricia Baskett

. . . hails from sunny California . . . an economics major, already planning for her Masters in Business Administration . . . New York City in all its aspects provides her most memorable experiences . . . sightseeing, modern art, modern poetry, Mozart—all are tops with Pat . . .

Nancy Beal

. . . wants to buck the conventions against women in the diplomatic corps . . . eventually combine that sort of career with marriage . . . an ardent theater-goer, concert-lover, a good hand with a sailboat, tennis racquet . . . enjoys long talks. New England winters at home . . .

Rita Beck

. . . accelerated psych major, London-born . . . will probably return to London to do psychiatric social work . . . likes skiing, the theater and Jascha Heifetz . . . has travelled in England, France, Belgium, Canada . . . attended summer school at Mt. Holyoke and Skidmore . . .

Margaret Beron

. . . majors in history, reads omnivorously in several languages . . . scholarly, she's looking forward to post-graduate work, enjoys Barnard's "atmosphere of individualism" . . . a dorm girl, with her family in Queens, has travelled through Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia . . .

Irma Berkowitz

. . . comes graduation, she'll be off to Alaska, as a math teacher . . . "I guess I always had a desire for adventure" . . . but Irma's not completely unprepared—she can ice skate . . . plays Brahms piano works with taste, and cultivates a love for ballet . . . modest and retiring, she enjoys the quiet life . . .

Beatrice Bodenstein

. . . an English major, plans either to teach it or write it . . . travelled to England at age of three . . . defines Barnard courses as comprehensive, down-to-business . . . and profs are first-rate . . . Maugham, the Russian authors are her favorites . . . and her best-loved play is "Berkeley Square" . . .

Evelyn Bialer

. . . one of the new International Studies majors . . . wants to go to Russia soon as the war's over, either for journalism or the State department . . . thinks Barnard is not sufficiently internationally-minded . . . loves intense philosophical discussions of world affairs . . . and modern music, authors . . .

Jean Boeder

. . . Choir and UCA member, likes church music, the atmosphere of St. Paul's . . . hopes to marry, raise scads of young'uns, combine it all with chemistry . . . dislikes Shostakovich . . . but enjoys everything else in the way of music . . . serious, without being solemn, contagiously cheerful . . .

Ruth Ann Bowman

. . . hails from Pikeville, Kentucky . . . transfer from a Southern college . . . thinks Barnard is wonderful . . . is majoring in Latin . . . but wants to do work in the fashion world . . . horseback riding, dancing, movies, books her pet recreations . . . but "nothing exciting ever happens to me" . . .

Jane Phillips Brewer

. . . a self-styled "army brat", her dad a Brigadier-General, her husband a Lieutenant in the Naval Air Force . . . a Vassar transfer who plans graduate work in Mathematics . . . paralleled by raising a family . . . self-contained, conscientious, she prizes Barnard's impersonality . . .

Doris Brandt

. . . Middlebury transfer . . . now commutes from Great Neck . . . especially enjoyed the course in The Novel . . . wishes Barnard Hall had a drinking fountain that worked . . . a Math major, wants a big family . . . farming and cooking experience preparing her . . . loves swimming, skiing, novels, and coffee . . .

THE COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY BOOKSTORE"

There's more than one reason why this expression is heard so often. It IS the shopping center of the campus—the place where you will find many desirable and useful things and get services that are not available elsewhere in the neighborhood.
